Obsert Julius is the most talked-of

Oscar Julius is the most talked-of man in the ring. With trainers that did not know their business, without being in any sort of condition, he accomplished 1500 miles. King is another surprise. He was tending bar in a Raines hotel on Sunday last, and at midnight he was on the track, ready to start in the race. Over 1,600 miles go to his credit.

Just litteen men out of the thirty-six

Just fifteen men out of the thirty-six that started lasted until the finish. No wonder that it was a heart-breaking, killing pace. Not one Saturday night could change his place on the black score board that has stared the poor fellows in the face for six long, weary days. A few rode fast to heat out Rivierre and Moore, who had places on that board though they were out of the race. Some did it; others failed.

With the exception of Rice, Enterman, Miller and Schinneer, nome of the men seemed to have suffered any mental effect from their long ride. All of the men named had to be given narcotics to quiet them. Physically all of the riders were in as good condition as could be expected. Just fifteen men out of the thirty-six princely ones are to be found. This particular Count Esterhazy, however, is but a left handed relative of the aristocratic Esterlazys. He is said to be the natural son of one of the Austrian counts of that name. His mother was a Frenchwoman. The count recognized his son, but did not legitimatize him. He gave him a fine education, however, secured him a place in the French army, and Ferdinand himself won premetion and social position. He essesses stars and crosses which give him quite an imposing appearance in a drawing room, and until recently he has been welcomed everywhere. At present, however, he is under a cloud.

Count Esterhazy was a major in the French army until early in the year, when he retired on account of ill health, but those who know him say that he is a most robust invalid. It is hinted that he foresaw the coming charges. A few years ago he was a poor man. Now he is rich. Perhaps he feared that the French government might be too inquisitive as to "how he got it." Prince Paul Esterhazy, who has been mentioned as the prospective husband of Mrs. Langtry, is quite a different person from the count and no connec-

It all happened in this wise: About a year ago, when he was secretary of the mayy, Mr. Herbert promised several prominent Kentuckians that the new warship now nearing completion should be named for their state. The promise was made at a dinner given in honor of the secretary. Miss Richardson was a guest at that dinner, and Mr. Herbert was so charmed with her beauty that he also promised that she should have the honor of christening the new battleship.

But a year has brought many changes. Mr. Herbert is no longer secretary of the navy, and Secretary Long asked Governor Bradley to select a young woman to christen the Kentucky. He either did not know or did not care that Miss Richardson had been promised the honor, for he announced recently that his daughter, Miss Christine Bradley, was to perform that office. No sooner did Miss Richardson hear that she was to be set aside than she began making things warm for Governor Bradley. In an interview she said some caustic things about him and insinuated that as every one knows, every Kentucky

There is no question among those who have made the test, that when common coffee and wilte bread are replaced by Postum Food Coffee and entire wheat preparations, there is a steady growth towards a vigorous, hearty physical and mental health.

The chamber of commerce of Lexington and the board of trade of Louisville, besides many individuals, had petitioned him to appoint Miss Christine. The north is the charmed quarter to them, and during their confinement in the hospital they have spent many hours gazing longingly out of the north windows of their wards.

They all visited the ice cellar for the last time, and Menney, the 10 year old boy, insisted on filling his pockets with pieces of ice. They were then put into a coach and driven to High Bridge. Explorer Peary will take them to their Arctic homes in the spring.

LOCAL DRAMATIC NEWS.

Thomas W.Keene's "Richelieu" in this city last season was much better than either his "Mare Antony" or "Shylock" t the Crawford theater Saturday.

Enough people went to see Mr. Keene as "Marc Antony" Saturday night to make one of the largest audiences that has been in the Crawford theater this season. While the lower floor was not full, standing room was sold in the baicony, and several ladies bought tickets to the gallery. This is significant, and could be ensily construed to mean that Mr. Keene's tragedy is regarded as Baltimore, Dec. 13.—The lengthy contest of Robert W. Clark, Jr., colored, for admission to the Maryland School of Art and Design has been decided against him. It was a vigorous fight to break down the color line at this institution. Jurge Ritchie dismissed the petition for mandanus and found against Clark on every point, deciaring in substance that he could not ask for such mandamus under the constitution of the United States, under the ordinance of the mayor and city council, or under the contract of the city with the Maryland institute.
